THERE was a heavy frost at Omaha on the night of the 21st inst.

THE Democrats of Pennsylvania, like those of Ohio, have in their State platform called for an indefinite increase of the currency.

THE Liberals in New York will not nominate a State ticket, but will reaffirm the principles enunciated by them in 1872 and maintain their organization.

BUSINESS in Chicago is reviving, so says one of its leading journals, and in proof of the assertion mentions the fact that their city clerk has issued 1,900 saloon licenses since the first of July.

THE Republicans of Maryland have united with the Citizens Reform party in the nomination of candidates for the State offices. In their platform they favor reform, oppose inflation and advocate a return to specie payment.

ONE of the Democratic orators, at a recent meeting at Steubenville, Ohio, made the startling announcement "that gold has no intrinsic value unless stamped by the government." That man will probably attempt to answer Carl Schurz when he speaks in that State.

CARL SCHURZ is going to speak in Ohio in favor of the resumption of specie payments. That means opposition to ancient William Allen, and is decidedly the best move the Republicans have made during the campaign. His first speech will be at Cincinnati next Monday evening.

AND now that the American rifle team beat all Europe in shooting M. H. Sanford, of New York, is going to visit England with a number of American race horses to contend for the racing prizes on the English turf, and see if America can't beat the rest of creation in horse racing.

IN Brooklyn caste prejudices has triumphed in the exclusion of a colored boy from a public school. To sustain his decision in the case Judge Gilbert gives the old idea that the State gives education as a charity and has a right to prescribe the terms upon which give it, and to exclude any class of tax payers it sees fit from any of the public schools. This doctrine is anti-Democratic and anti-Republican, and would lead to the sanction of the abuses that result from a union of Church and State.

FAST mail trains from the Eastern to the Western cities have been established by means of which the latter get the papers of the former twelve hours earlier than before these fast trains were started. Postmaster General Jewell has tendered the thanks of the Department to the managers of the lines over which the fast trains are run. He says: "The accuracy, system and speed with which you are now transferring our mails, are, I think, unequalled anywhere in the world, and I believe mark an epoch in our progress."

IN Wisconsin they are said to have sent out as campaign documents lithographic portraits of the renominated State officers. The Kansas City Journal of Commerce suggests that for the Democrats of Missouri to adopt such tactics would stampede the party from its candidates.

In a letter written from Cowley county, a correspondent of the Leavenworth Times has the following in reference to poor farms:

"This western country must, of necessity, be burthened with poor farms, and miserable farmers as long as so many of them continue to spend so much of their time in towns, and so much of their limited means for whisky. Will they ever learn that time is money, and that whisky is poison?"

OF LATE years great attention has been paid to sanitary matters in New Orleans, and there has been a corresponding decrease in the number of deaths during the hot season. This year only four deaths have as yet resulted from yellow fever. Cleanliness and a proper observance of the laws of health may yet banish yellow fever from our Southern ports.

FROM all parts of the State comes the report that farmers are shipping in sheep with the intention of giving the wool growing business a trial. It would be well for them to petition the Legislature for a law protecting the sheep from dogs. A tax of one dollar per head levied on dogs would raise a fund in every county large enough to pay for all sheep killed by them, and we believe that our Legislature would pass such a law if our farmers would get up a petition to that effect.

THERE are several families in our county who are thinking of moving to Texas, and we publish the following from the Denison News that they may have a correct knowledge of the educational advantages that State is likely to offer them:

Judging from the action of the members of the constitutional convention, a large majority of that body are opposed to special taxation for the support of public schools, and will probably incorporate in the constitution a section prohibiting corporations from levying such taxes. In that event it will be impossible for us to keep up our public school more than four months in the year, and of course a graded school will be out of the question.

THAT ignorance and crime go hand in hand has long been recognized as a fact, and the advocates of compulsory education will find in a circular issued by the Bureau of Education at Washington, which gives the statistics of reformatory institutions in this country, a strong argument in their favor. It is shown that of the thousands of boys and girls who become subjects for reformatory institutions that few, if any, have had any considerable school advantages, and that it is from neglect, and not vicious inclinations, that they find their way into these institutions. Universal education is the hope of the country, and all opposition to our free schools should be promptly put down.

IN an article on the herd law the Wichita Eagle gives some interesting figures. It says:

"The capital in railroads is live, making a stock holder and the country through which they pass rich. The money invested in fences is dead, unproductive, cumbering the ground and filling up the tax rolls, and not returning a single cent of profit. Take Sedgewick county for instance: We have twenty-eight townships, or 1,008 sections of land. Fence this area up into forty acre fields, on an average, with a rod around each section, and it would take ten miles of fence to each section, or 3,200 rods, or 5,225,600 rods of fence for the county. This at twelve cents a foot for post and board fence would cost $6,386,688, enough to grid-iron the county with railroads. The taxes at two per cent, over and above the cost for repairs, would not be less than $127,732 per annum."

WHAT a change there has been among Democrats in reference to greenbacks. In Indiana, where they are now demanding an unlimited issue of the legal tenders, Dan Voorhies was in the habit, when addressing Democratic mass meetings just after the first issue of these notes, of taking a ten dollar green back and holding it up before his audience with the query, Is that money? He was most emphatic in his declarations that it was not, and he would then declare that in five years the man who would offer one of these bills to pay for a meal's victuals would be considered greener than the greenbacks. (Applaud.) And now these men—some of whom we fear have no more regard for the good of our country than they had then—want greenbacks issued until the "demands of trade" shall cry enough.

THE St. Louis Republican thinks that from the unwise resurrection of the money question in Ohio the Democratic party is threatened with a ruinous schism; and in speaking of the late convention in New York says:

The emphatic, resolute declaration of the Democrats of the most powerful State in the Union in favor of specie resumption has a meaning and will have an effect greater even than was imagined before the declaration was made. Coming as it does, in the crisis of the struggle in Ohio and right on the heels of the contrary resolution adopted by the Democrats of Pennsylvania, it would wear an appearance of audacity but for the calm argumentative tone in which it is made. The New York platform not only demands a speedy return to specie payment, but compacts into a few sentences unanswerable reasons for it, and fortifies the whole by quoting the resolution of the last Democratic national convention in favor of the same demand—thus showing that the Democrats of Ohio and Pennsylvania and all who applaud them, are really in revolt against the dogmas of the national party.

VICE-PRESIDENT WILSON, in answer to a letter from a member of the Massachusetts Republican State Committee, gives good advice to the party in Massachusetts and in other States. He says for many months the position and prospects of the party have been a cause of solicitude. It was founded to redress human wrongs and advance human rights and if its luster has been dimmed it is because it has somewhat departed from these grand principles which called it into being. As an evidence that there is true vitality in the party, he mentions that "unfaithful officials have been dismissed, and the public voice imperatively demands that all such shall be; and there is increasing evidence that the party in whose ranks is found so much of the worth and character of the country looks with regret—as it was expressed by a British Statesman—upon every hour that passes over recognized and unrecognized abuses." In attempting to reconcile divisions and heartily unite the party he is opposed to any "lowering of the standard in regard to principles, measures or men." He advises Republicans to adopt the motto, "Forgive, forget, unite," and to earnestly invite those to return who are in sympathy with the fundamental principles of the party, but who, for some cause, have failed to give their support. The advice of the Vice-President is candid, plain and practical, and is worthy the consideration, not only of the Republicans of Massachusetts, but of Republicans everywhere.

GREAT STORM ALONG THE GULF.

The coast cities and towns of Texas were visited by a fearful storm last week which destroyed hundreds of lives, an immense amount of property and rendered a multitude of families destitute and homeless. In the city of Galveston, which is situated on an island, the water was driven through the city to the bay, the railroad bridge across the bay was destroyed, the telegraph wires all broken down, and all or nearly all of the entire island was under water. A vast amount of property was destroyed, houses were washed from off their foundations into the streets and a large number of them were blown down and destroyed, but fortunately there were but few lives lost. Although the loss to this city has been heavy the damages will doubtless soon be repaired and its business go on as formerly.

The town of Indianola, which is situated on Madagorda bay, was almost entirely destroyed and about one hundred and fifty of its inhabitants were drowned and their dead bodies strewn for twenty miles along the beach. The towns of Sutteria, Matagorda, Cedar Lake and Velasco were entirely swept away, and in one of them not a soul was left to tell the particulars of their sad fate. Quite a number of steamers and schooners were wrecked and many of those on board of them were drowned. The storm seems to have extended over a strip of country some forty miles wide, from the north of Galveston Island to the north of Houston. It will be some time before it can be known how many lives were lost, or an estimate can be made as to the amount of property destroyed. The year 1875 has been noted for severe storms and great floods throughout the world, but the storm along the coast of Texas, so far as we know, is unparalleled. The suffering and sorrowing people thus rendered homeless are receiving aid from a generous public.

Scraper for October.

The first page of Scribner's Monthly for October has a design by LaFarge, N. A., accompanying the ballad of "Jesse's Mine," by George Parsons Lathrop. Major Powell the well-known Western explorer, gives in this number an account of "An Overland trip to the Grand Canyon" of the Colorado, the descent of which he has already described in that Magazine. In the present article he tells the tragic fate of the small band who left the main party during the former expedition. Major Powell introduced a curious Indian story in the course of his narrative. Mr. Francis Gerry Fairfield prints a remarkable study of Poe, under the title of "A Mad Man of Letters." L. L. L. writes "Recollections of Liszt and Von Bulow." Edmund Clarence Stedman concludes what he has to say about "Minor Victorian Poets," prior to the publication of this series in book form by Osgood. "Some vegetable acronyms" are described by Byron D. Halsted (the illustrations of this paper are noticeable); Mr. Frank R. Stockton continues, "with variations," the story of "Pierrot, Warrior and Statesman." Mrs. Walker tells about "The Winthrop-Drury Affair." Dr. Holland continues his story of "Sevenoaks"; Jules Verne's "Mysterious Island" appears in its condensed form, but occupies more space than usual; and there is a "Plea for Slippers" by an anonymous writer. The poets of the number besides Mr. Lathrop, are Susan Coolidge, R. K., Mary L. Ritter, William Motherwell (a posthumous poem by the author of "Jeanie Morrison"), H. H., Kate Carlisle, Mary E. Bradley, George A. Baker, Jr., and R. W. G.

Dr. Holland, in Topics of the Times, discusses "Church Debts." "Offensive People," "A Word for the Women," and "The Slow Times." The Old Cabinet is concerned with "How Badly We Do It," Home and Society, Culture and Progress, The World's Work, and Brice-Brac have their usual variety.

The Emporia Real Estate Register says: "We have stalks of buckwheat in our office, raised on upland, which are eight feet and six inches long. How much longer they would have grown, if left undisturbed we have no means of knowing."

In a recent speech in the German Legislature Herr Wachter declared that the terrible looseness of morals in Berlin was due to the evil influence of the popular theaters, where all the most sacred associations of religion, morality, and marriage are turned into ridicule.

No sooner is the new direct cable finished than the old ocean telegraph company hauls down its rates to twenty-five cents per word in gold—the rates of the new company. W. W. says that competition isn't a good thing?

NOTES AND EXTRACTS.

The platform of the Pennsylvania Democracy has a true ring, and is good enough for the National Convention next May.—Indianapolis Sentinel.

No man in his senses, who looks at the question in issue and reflects upon the motive of human action, can have the least distrust of the election of Gov. Allen.—Cincinnati Inquirer (Dem.).

Hendricks was not expected to say much, but it was something to have him appear with Gov. Allen at a Democratic meeting. It shows, at least he is as weakly as Thurman to stick to a party, right or wrong.—Boston Advertiser.

"Shall this nation become a liar and a thief?" is the glaring head-line of a leader in the Philadelphia Bulletin. We are unable to answer this question decisively; but the Democracy shan't run the machine if we can help it.—Cincinnati Times (Rep.).

The Republicans of Mississippi have a fair majority in that State of at least 35,000. Everybody admits this; it would be folly to deny it; yet we find Senator Gordon of Georgia, and numberless Democratic newspapers predicting a Democratic victory, this fall. How is this victory to be gained? There are but two ways. One is by fraud, the other by intimidation. The latter has already begun; if it promises to be unsuccessful then fraud will be employed.—Commonwealth.

It is a great comfort to know that there really is nothing new under the sun. When we find the good Democrats of Pennsylvania running down the hill, life the swine in Scripture, as fast as they can in the Republican puddle at the bottom thereof, our first impulse naturally is to think at our times are curst above all earlier days, and there never have been in the world such utter madmen as those with whom we have to deal.—New York World (Dem.).

Jeff. Davis had such splendid success with inflation of the currency when he was President of the Confederate Democracy that he has come North to help the Bill Allenites to a little of the same snake bit him. He is making able and eloquent speeches at Fair Grounds in favor of bushels of paper based on the promissory credit of a demoralized mass of people. Ohio having elected Bill Allen Governor once, ought to take the advice of such patriotic advocates as Jeff Davis. The Democratic Central Committee ought to bring Jeff to Ohio. He will do better than Thurman.—Dayton Journal.

The inflation plank in the platform of the Erie Convention proves a stimulus to the exertions of both parties [in Ohio] and both undoubtedly sincere in claiming victory in advance. It is evident that this contest will not be decided, as many in Ohio have been, by party lines; in that event the Republicans would have only to bring out their great reserve force in order to sweep the field. Efforts are now made not so much to raise the cheering cry as to convert the waking voter, and the canvassers of either party are making inroads upon the other, and basing estimates of results upon the number of probable desertions from the camp of the enemy.—New York Tribune.
